History: James Carson and a miner, named Angel, in the late summer of 1848, came to the creek in the area in search of gold. Angel put up his tent and established a trading post, while Carson moved on and discovered the rock diggings at Carson Hill. Angel's trading post became popular and a settlement soon developed which was called Angel's Camp.

Description: Two views of Main Street, taken in 1920's show features of typical Mother Lode towns, with false front buildings with marquice, porches and balconies on crooked mountain town street.
